Ms. Katherine D. Schmitt
Acting Director
Office for Victims of Crime
Office of Justice Programs
U.S. Department of Justice

Dear Acting Assistant Attorney General Cohen and Acting Director Schmitt:

As you are aware, immediate publication of the Crime Victims Fund (CVF) victim assistance allocation tables, and prompt distribution of Fiscal Year 2025 Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) formula grants, are critical to maintaining lifesaving services. With the FY 2025 program year already under way, having begun on July 1, 2025, states still cannot finalize budgets or disburse funds to providers that support survivors of domestic violence, sexual assault, human trafficking, and child abuse.

VOCA, established by Congress in 1984, channels criminal fines and penalties, not taxpayer dollars, to approximately 6,500 local organizations that reach more than six-million victims each year.¹ Persistent declines in deposits since 2018 have pushed the VOCA system to a breaking point. Despite these shortages, the Crime Victims Fund still holds more than $4.6 billion in unobligated balances, resources that will remain out of reach until FY 2025 allocation tables are released.²

Across the country, providers now face unprecedented funding gaps. Nationwide, VOCA allocations have fallen nearly 50 percent since 2018, magnifying the strain on every state's victim service network. California has experienced a 67 percent cut in VOCA assistance since 2019, and in the same period, law-enforcement agencies logged roughly 18 domestic violence calls every hour, underscoring the scale of unmet need.³ Wisconsin have seen its annual VOCA allocation plunge from roughly $44 million to $13 million, forcing shelters to lay off staff, limit beds, and in some cases pause medical-advocacy coverage.⁴ In Tennessee, more than 360 victim-service nonprofits have petitioned the state for a $25 million recurring fund after federal reductions left them on the brink of closure.⁵ Compounding the crisis, recent staff removals and grant-cycle suspensions at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services have frozen Family Violence

Prevention and Services Act awards, making timely Office of Victim Services (OVC) disbursement all the more critical, and leaving organizations unsure whether promised dollars will arrive.⁶

July 1, 2025, marked the start of the FY 2025 program year, yet OVC has still not released the FY 2025 CVF allocation tables, which remain listed as “forthcoming.” Unless issued immediately, states will be unable to execute sub-awards on time.

To avert a nationwide service cliff, we request the following actions:

- Publish the FY 2025 state allocation tables and award notices without further delay.
- Award 100 percent of FY 2025 VOCA assistance grants by September 30, 2025.

Given the gravity of this national shortfall, and with vital survivor services hanging in the balance, swift federal action to publish state allocation tables and award notices is essential. Thank you for your prompt attention to this urgent matter; we stand ready to work with you to ensure survivors receive uninterrupted support.

Sincerely,

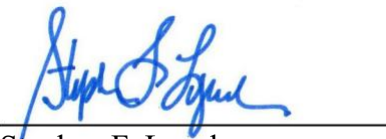

Jim Costa
